Meaning and Definitions of Economic Planning :

Economic planning is a time bound programme to achieve certain objectives with the help of available resources by the planning authority.

According to Dr. H. D. Dickinson :

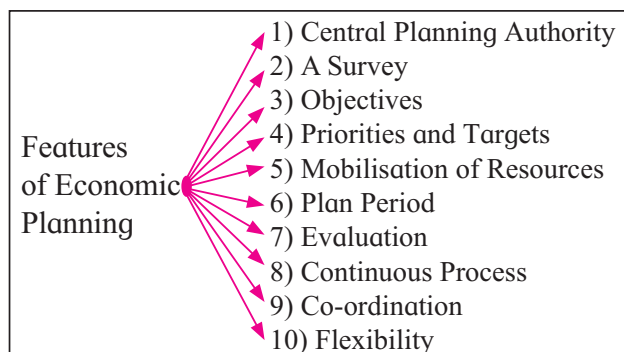

"Economic planning is the making of major economic decisions such as what and how much to be produced how, when and where it is to be produced, to whom it is to be allocated by the conscious decision of the determinate authority, on the basis of a comprehensive survey of the economy as a whole".

According to Mrs. Barbara Wooten :

"Planning is a conscious and deliberate choice of economic priorities by some public authority."

Features of Economic Planning :

Economic planning has the following features:

1) Central Planning Authority : Central Planning Authority in a country undertakes economic planning. In India, it was known as Planning Commission. It has been replaced by National Institution for Transforming India i.e. NITI Aayog since 2015.

2) A Survey : A comprehensive survey of the economy is undertaken regarding the availability and utilisation of human and natural resources.

3) Objectives : Economic planning is based on certain pre-determined objectives which are realistic and flexible.

4) Priorities and targets : Priorities are fixed according to the importance of each sector for accelerating economic development. Target is the concrete step towards the attainment of objectives.

5) Mobilisation of Resources : The resources needed for planning are mobilised through various sources like taxation, domestic savings, deficit financing, public debt, external assistance etc.

6) Plan Period : Plan period varies as per needs. In countries like India, planning is generally for a period of five years.

7) Evaluation : Periodic assessment such as mid term appraisal is done to incorporate necessary changes in priorities and targets of the plan.

8) Continuous Process : Economic planning is a continuous process. It aims at economic development of the country.

9) Co-ordination : States of the country also undertake economic planning along with the centre. Thus, co-ordination between the centre and states is ensured.

10) Flexibility : Central Planning Authority maintains flexibility in its approach. This makes it possible to incorporate necessary changes in the plan as per requirements during its implementation.
